ABOUT

Neale Marvin is Co-Head of DC Advisory's Global Infrastructure Group based in London, with over 20 years of Infrastructure experience.

Previous roles have included heading up the Infrastructure advisory platform at JPMorgan, a senior member of the Infrastructure Finance team at Dresdner Kleinwort and lead analyst at Moody's in the utilities and energy sector.

Neale says: "In my career, I have worked on M&A and debt deals across the broader Infrastructure sector – from utilities, ESG transition, district heating and digital, to airports, toll roads, ports, transportation logistics and rail, as well as the more hybrid sectors like BESS, motorway services, towers, smart meters and waste. The variety and pace of change within the sector is what makes this job so exciting, and DC's position as market leaders enables us to react and respond accordingly to offer the best outcomes for our clients."
